Ato Essandoh

The "Copper" and "Elementary" Interview

Hypnotizing audiences as D'Artagnan, the slave who was mauled to death by dogs in "Django Unchained," Ato Essandoh stars as Dr. Matthew Freeman in the 2nd season of BBC America's highest-rated series premiere ever, "Copper." Born in Schenectady, New York on July 29, 1972, Ato also returns as the fan-favorite former carjacker and Watson's (Lucy Liu) possible replacement, Alfredo Llamasa, in CBS' "Elementary."

On the big screen, Ato is widely recognized for his memorable performances in "Garden State," "Blood Diamond" and "Hitch," and for equally-stellar work on such TV shows as "Blue Bloods," "Damages," "The Good Wife" and "Law & Order," to name a few. Prior to acting, he studied chemical engineering at Cornell University, where he took a dare to appear in a stage production of "Paper Moon."
