

Ebony Fashion Fair fires up Minnesota with season's hottest fashions

Written by Alaina L. Lewis

On Sunday, May 17, the world's largest traveling fashion show, The Ebony Fashion Fair, made its annual return to the Minneapolis. When the first LaRare suede boot heel was pressed against the stage, the temperature gauge in the room increased several notches, as the runway was continually lit with a trail of this season's hottest and sought after fashions.

To some, the mere mention of a fashion show ignites ideologies of couture designs escaping through the robotic catwalking sways of a typically whitewashed runway show. But as the quaint afternoon began at the brim of The 51st Annual Ebony Fashion Fair, that myth was quickly dispelled after a fleet of 13 uniquely beautiful models took center stage and stamped their imprint into the runway.

The intricate rhythms befit a soundtrack of Hip Hop and R&B, easily guided the atypically choreographed stage event towards an attitude of sassiness and sophistication, brought on by this year's theme, “

The Runway Report:
What's Hip, What's Hot. What's Now.”
