“While I spent 14 years in the NBA playing basketball, I always had bigger dreams of building a business empire... It was not an easy transition, however. I stumbled now and then as I began... More than a few skeptics told me that I was wrong to focus on underserved urban communities... They were wrong. Where they saw only problems, I created abundant opportunities. Today, Magic Johnson Enterprises is a multimillion dollar company.

There were many people who felt that my life was over when I discovered that I had HIV. Again they were wrong on all counts. I am grateful to be as healthy, strong, and every bit as energetic as in my NBA days... I hope that you will learn from my experiences and benefit from the lessons I've shared. My goal is to help you fulfill your business dreams while bettering your life and the lives of those around you.”

For the NBA Hall of Famer-turned-Captain of Industry has distilled his business philosophy down into some sound practical advice for folks willing to roll up their sleeves to try to pull themselves up by their bootstraps.

The book is broken down into four parts: Business Strategies, Business Plays, Business Options and Business Leadership, with each of those sections containing between seven and 10 chapters each. Magic's sub-headings give you a good idea of what to expect, as his suggestions include everything from “Create a guiding vision” to “Buy a good business and make it better” to “Zealously protect and build your brand” to “Think of your employees as fellow entrepreneurs” to “Focus on the customer and you will never go wrong.”

Informative and inspirational, and written in an easy-to-read accessible style, 32 Ways to Be a
