

Students of WE WIN Institute were recently treated to the gift of living history

Written by

Wednesday, 29 May 2013 13:30

Children kindergarten through 2nd grade learned about the incredible life of Dr. Josie Robinson Johnson, who has given and sacrificed her all in the benefit of African-American people.

After reading about the accomplishments of Johnson, WE WIN's youngest learners worked with their teacher to develop an essay about the life of this African-American icon that would show her that they understood her contributions to their community. The students had a discussion about what they wanted to include in their essay and their WE WIN teacher helped them create a collaborative essay.

When the students presented in front of Johnson, each one of them told her a fact about her life. It was clear, she was impressed that these young people knew so much about her.

Below is the essay the students presented.

