

Khai Clardy goes to Washington D.C

Written by

Thursday, 17 June 2010 13:56

Khai Clardy, a sophomore at Highland Park Senior High, was recently nominated to represent the state of Minnesota as a National Scholar at the National Young Leaders Conference (NYLC) to be held in Washington D.C. this summer. She will attend the conference July 24 - August 2.

Her nomination places her among a select group of the nation's top high school students. Less than 1% of all high achieving students are presented with this opportunity, and many alumni of the program report that it is a life changing experience.

With members of the United States Congress serving on the Honorary Congressional Board of Advisors, the National Young Leaders Conference is the premier leadership program in the country, designed for the nation's best and brightest high school scholar.

Together, with other distinguished young scholars emerging as the worlds future leaders, Clardy will meet with high ranking government officials, members of congress, and prominent media figures.

National Young Leaders Conference provides students with the opportunity to develop their own leadership skills by working with members of executive, legislative and judicial branches of the government, and witnessing first hand the U.S constitutional process.

For more information on NYLC go to www.nylc.org.