Amirah Coney, 16, is a student at St. Paul Central High School.

Coney is a member of SHE, a student group at her high school that advocates for, and promotes female empowerment. The engaged teenager is highly focused on her academics – her favorite subject is science and she also loves to learn about African-American history. One of her career goals is to be a coroner because of her interest in forensic science. Coney is also a teacher's assistant to an accelerated pre-calculus teacher. She has a strong passion for track and field and plans to join St. Paul Central's track team.

It should be noted that this ambitious student has an entrepreneurial side.
